

This is a highly detailed architectural site plan of a large building complex. The plan features several large, interconnected blue-shaded building footprints. Interspersed among these buildings are numerous pink-shaded rectangular areas, which likely represent courtyards, parking lots, or landscaped zones. A prominent, thick orange line runs diagonally from the upper left towards the lower right, possibly indicating a major road, railway, or a specific boundary. The entire site is overlaid with a dense network of thin lines in various colors (red, blue, green, black), representing property boundaries, easements, or utility lines. Small circles, often with numbers inside, are scattered throughout the plan, marking specific points of interest or survey stations. Text labels in various fonts and sizes are present, identifying streets (e.g., 'Władysława Halczy', 'Rodzeństwa Krzyżowskich'), building numbers, and other site-specific information. The overall layout suggests a complex, multi-functional facility with a well-defined internal structure and external access points.
